SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF
SELECTED PAINTINGS
BY CONTEMPORARY
AMERICAN ARTISTS
GALLERIES IV, VI, VIII, VIIIA

JUNE, JULY, AUGUST, 1928

FOREWORD

AMERICAN painting has progressed steadily, being less affected by definite so-called movements than the painting of other countries. Nevertheless, American painting has passed through many phases, and each phase evinces the expression of its time.

The present exhibition shows the American painter less influenced by old conventions than ever before, not at all copying the methods of other countries, original in both ideas and execution and imbued with a new spirit of adventure.

This same spirit of adventure animated the Hudson River School and caused it to strike out into fresh fields.

An earnest endeavor to make some contribution to the progress of art in every canvas is the ideal of the true artist.

This endeavor one finds in great measure in the present exhibition.

Those who have studied the Summer Exhibitions of this Museum for the past fifteen years will recognize many old friends with an enlarged vision, and will observe many painters not heretofore represented.
